OKINAWA
The Oasis of Japan
ACCESS

There are three international airports in Okinawa: Naha Airport, Ishigaki Airport and Naha-shintoshihama Airport. Naha Airport, situated in Naha, the prefectural capital of Okinawa, is linked by direct flights not only to major cities in Japan, but also to Taipei, Seoul, Hong Kong, Shanghai, Bangkok, Singapore and other major cities in Asia, providing superior access from anywhere in the world. From the Okinawa Main Island, there is access to ferry or airplane to outlying islands.

OKINAWA ISLANDS

Okinawa Prefecture forms the southeastern tip of Japan. It consists of 37 islands with Okinawa Prefecture’s main island, Okinawa, formed along the Chirads Tina as Hawaiian, Miami, Couto and other popular world resort areas. The Okinawa Prefecture’s Okinawa Island is renowned for its annual average temperature of 25 degrees. It also has many outstanding beaches and is a popular destination for winter tourists with an annual average temperature of approximately 20 degrees.

HISTORY

Okinawa was once an independent region, called “Mikosu Risso” or “Mikosu Risso” from a fruitful trade with various parts of Asia and Southeast Asia. Okinawa was administered under the administration of the United States after World War II and was once referred to as Okinawa in English. It is an important history for other regions of Japan. Okinawa has developed its own unique culture influenced by China, Japan and other Asian and Western countries.
